Raiderettes lose to Lady Devils

The Raiderette girls tennis team lost 6-3 to Rustburg last Tuesday under cloudy, cold skies.

Michelle Ford and Donna Dickerson were singles-match winners for the Raiderettes, with Ford defeating Rustburg's Susan Hall 8-5, and Dickerson downing Stephanie Bryant 8-6.

The Raiderette doubles team of Michelle Ford and Susan Booker won the third match for Appomattox, defeating Carol Clinedist and Susan Hall, 8-2.

The other matches were all very close, with two of the contests decided by 6-8 scores, and a third by an 8-9 score. Raiderette Anne Caldwell lost to Carol Clinedist, 8-9; Susan Booker lost to Rustburg's Christy Johnson, 6-8; and Raiderette Anne Hancock lost to Mary Beth Wade, 6-8.

In doubles, the Caldwell-Sally Coleman team lost to Rustburg's L. Roberts and Christy Johnson, 1-8; and Raiderettes Donna Dickerson and Jennifer Colemna lost to S. Bryant and Christy Booth, 1-8.

"We have been working hard to improved our techniques and strategies for the upcoming matches," said Raiderette coach Jan Jennings.

The Raiderettes were scheduled to play Jefferson Forest April 10 after the Times-Virginian's deadline, and the team is slated to play Brookville this Friday at Brookville.

The three remaining home matches for the Raiderettes are April 20 against Liberty, April 24 against Gretna, and May 2 against Altavista. All matches start at 4:30 p.m.

The GFCI is a new, sensitive device that just might save your life!

Each year 600 Americans die from electrocutions in or around their homes, reports the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission. Installation of GFCI's in American homes will help prevent such tragedies.

Contrary to what you might think, even small electrical current--less than that needed to light an ordinary 60-watt light bulb--can kill you. Don't depend on fuses and circuit breakers to protect you. They are not sensitive to small currents. Grounded plugs and grounding wires won't help either if they are broken or improperly installed.

A GFCI is the best answer! GFCI stands for Ground Fault Circuit Interrupter. A GFCI reacts immediately to the smallest electrical current leak and breaks the electrity flow.

Here's the situation...

Electrical current always seeks a path to the ground. If the electrical product you are using has the slightest current "Leak," it will flow to the exposed metal parts of the product. And, if the situation is just right, that "leak" will flow through you to the ground or any object that you are touching that, in turn, touches the ground such as a faucet or metal pipe or ladder. Then what happens is a "ground fault." "Ground faults" can range from a mere "tingle" to immediate electrocution. Add water to the situation, and the problem is magnified.

You Have Three Choices of GFCI's...

GFCI's come in three types. The portable unit is simply plugged into any standard outlet and can be purchased at your local hardware store. It will protect you only from leakage out of products plugged into that outlet. A second type is installed by an electrician in your circuit breaker box and protects all outlets on that circuit. Another GFCI is permanently installed in a wall outlet receptacle and can be wired to protect other outlets on the same circuit.

You should consider GFCI's in your kitchen, laundry area, bathrooms, the workshop and for all outside outlets. Consult your electrican on the best choices for your home. If you are buying or building a new house, the GFCI is required by the National Electric Code in all bathroom, garage and outdoor outlets.
